

CANCER

Sufferers from this horrible malady nearly always inherit it—not necessarily from the parents, but may be from some remote ancestor, for Cancer often runs through several generations. This deadly poison may lay dormant in the blood for years, or until you reach middle life, then the first little sore or ulcer makes its appearance—or a swollen gland in the breast, or some other part of the body, gives the first warning.

To cure Cancer thoroughly and permanently all the poisonous virus must be eliminated from the blood—every vestige of it driven out. This S. S. S. does, and is the only medicine that can reach deep-seated, obstinate blood troubles like this. When all the poison has been forced out of the system the Cancer heals, and the disease never returns.

Cancer begins often in a small way, as the following letter from Mrs. Shiner shows:

A small pimple came on my jaw about an inch below the ear on the left side of my face. It gave me no pain or inconvenience, and I should have forgotten about it had it not begun to inflame and itch; it would bleed a little, then scab over, but would not heal. This continued for some time, when my jaw began to swell, becoming very painful. The Cancer began to eat and spread, until it was as large as a half dollar, when I heard of S. S. S. and determined to give it a fair trial, and it was remarkable what a wonderful effect it had from the very beginning; the sore began to heal and after taking a few bottles disease disappeared entirely. This was two years ago; there are still no signs of the Cancer, and my general health continues good. Mrs. R. Shiner, La Plata, Mo.

Doctors try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, when they think it is caused by imperfect digestion of food.

You can do the same.

It may or may not be caused by the failure of stomach and bowels to do their work. If it is, you will cure it; if not, you will do no harm.

The way, to cure a disease is to stop its cause, and help the body get back to its habit of health.

When Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil does that, it cures; when it don't, it don't cure. It never does harm.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME SOCIETY.

Never has there arisen an organization that is capable of doing so much as this society for the needy helpless class to which its energies are devoted. It is nothing less than a practicable plan for saving every homeless child in America, and giving it a good fair chance in life. Its achievements, even to the present time, are wonderful. Organized fifteen years ago, it has spread into twenty-six States; and although, in many of these it has merely begun its work, it has cared for more than sixteen thousand homeless children. Wherever it is thoroughly organized, it is saving more children than all other institutions. The society is non-sectarian and combines in its scope all churches, and all benevolently disposed people. It has been heartily endorsed by the leading churches in their executive gatherings. It is broad in the application of its charities, receiving not only orphans and semi-orphans, but children both of whose parents are living—demanding only that the child needs a home; that its parents or guardians are unable to provide for it; that the child is under fourteen years of age; that it is of sound mind and body, and, if over eight years old, that it is not hard to control. In-correctible children are left to the reform schools.

The wards of the Children's Home Society are not placed in a public Children's Home. It does not use the asylum system, nor does it place the children out as servants, but puts them in well selected family homes, to be raised as members of the families receiving them—to be sent to school, to Sunday School and to church, and to be brought up as Christian men should raise their own children. While some may regard these as stringent requirements, they demand only the protection that ought to be given to every child; and it is gratifying to know that in every State in which the society has operated for a few years, more homes have applied for children than the society could supply. Nor have the children, except in rare cases, disappointed those who have received them; but have developed into better children, than the average of those who have been brought up by their own parents. This is the result of the careful selection of homes, and shows that extreme views of the power of heredity have little foundations—that the child is almost entirely what training and environment make it. However, it is a mistake to suppose that a large proportion of these children are from the slums, or of criminal parentage. Many of them are of good average lineage, and some, of much more than average capacity, both intellectually and morally; while a few are of that desirable class the children of confident girls, who have "Loved not wisely, but too well"—children who are often more brilliant and more warmly affectionate than those of other classes, and so far as blood goes, there are some that are highly born yet, as previously intimated, this is not essential to good results. One State Senator, three Governors, at least one minister—the leader of his denomination in his State—and a vice president of the United States are among the many noted characters who have developed from the children of the slums.

Not only does the Children's Home Society place their wards in good homes, but it guards them till they are grown, removing them if wronged or neglected, and placing them in other homes, thus guarding the interests of the children as no other organization can do.

Nor does it conserve the interests of the child only. By the organization of a whole State it can more surely than any other organization find about such a child as may be wanted by an applicant; since a description of each child received is sent to the state office—and in due time, somewhere in the State, the needed child may be secured. The result has been that so well are the people generally suited with the little ones given them, that the expression is not unusual—"We could not have suited ourselves better, if we had had a hundred to choose from."

A remarkable feature of the work is the economy with which it is conducted. It is not strange that in conducting a public children's home, an annual outlay of a hundred dollars per child is necessary to meet current expenses—in many cases much more; and since the time that the child remains in the asylum does not often average less than five years the cost of placing the average child in a home by that system, is not less than $500. But this society places children and watches over them till grown at an average of $50 each—ten children well cared for with the same amount that the asylum system cares for one. At the asylum they wait for the people to come for the child; by this plan, the agent goes out, finds and investigates the homes. Though it simply brings demand and supply together, it secures a higher grade of homes than can be found by the other system.

This result is secured by organization. Each State is divided into districts, with a superintendent over each district, and a State Superintendent over all. In addition to these a local board is appointed in every town village and precinct, to care for the work in that immediate locality. These boards are again divided into committees, each having its part of the work to perform. It is through this system that so great a work has been effected.

The Kentucky society was started four years ago. For the past eighteen months, under the management of Geo. L. Sehan, its devoted State Superintendent, with his able corps of assistants, it has done a good work. Since last May, it has cared for more needy children than all the "Children's Homes" in the State.

It will not be questioned by those who have familiarized themselves with the work of this society, that it is one of the great movements of the closing century. It is protecting not simply the helpless but the innocent; it is doing this in the best possible way—putting them into good homes to be loved and cherished and this it is doing in the most effectual method possible; while some of these little ones are taken from such surroundings that, had they remained there, they must of necessity have developed into criminals costing the state thousands of dollars.

In no way can homeless children secure better protection than by being placed in the care of this society; in no way can those who are willing to care for little ones, be better supplied; in no way can money be expended that it will accomplish more good.
